Anti-cult Orders Established On Children's Blood

Sometimes one event becomes the beginning of a chain of tragedies that bring suffering to a huge number of people and shedding of innocent children's blood. While scattered attempts are being made in the public field to find perpetrators and causes of every specific tragedy, the true culprits remain in the shadows, reveling in their power over the minds and actions of masses of people.

1993. Revival of Anti-Cult Nazism. Trigger Event: The Waco Tragedy

On February 28, 1993, the FBI and the US National Guard forces besieged members of the Branch Davidian religious organization in their Mount Carmel compound near Waco, Texas. 86 people died during the siege, including 25 children among whom were infants and kids under 3 years old, as well as women and elderly people. The siege ended on April 19, 1993. The Mount Carmel compound burned to the ground.

During the siege, negotiations were held with the organization leader, David Koresh. Apart from FBI officers, the negotiations were also conducted by the lawyers of some of the Branch Davidians, Jack Zimmerman and Dick DeGuerin. Commschool shootingsnicating with the besieged, the lawyers reached an agreement thanks to which the Branch Davidians were going to leave their place of residence, that is, the siege goal of "saving the alleged hostages" would have been achieved. It seemed that the tense situation was nearing its resolution. Mr. Zimmerman and Mr. DeGuerin sincerely sought to help the children who lived in Mount Carmel, so it came as a great shock to them when the FBI launched its unexpected deadly attack with hazardous gas [1].

"'We had a deal. We were going to do it,' said Jack Zimmerman, a Houston lawyer who represented Koresh's assistant and was permitted to enter the compound during the 51-day period when Koresh was negotiating with the FBI."

"DeGuerin called the episode 'the biggest failure of his life.' When he learned the siege ended in an inferno, he said: 'I was shocked... I thought we had some time. Mr. Zimmerman and I met most of the people in there. I met the children. I wanted to save their lives... I feel that I failed'."

"I feel that I failed,' lawyer says of raid

Published July 26, 1995 | Updated Oct. 4, 2005

Two lawyers told a congressional hearing Tuesday they had negotiated a detailed surrender plan with the FBI and cult leader David Koresh that could have ended the siege near Waco, Texas, and averted a surprise government assault on the Branch Davidian complex that left about 80 sect members and children dead.

Excerpt from "The IMPACT" documentary:

"On the day of the assault on Mount Carmel the FBI used the combat chemical agent CS against civilians, including innocent children and infants. Those who gave and executed the orders knew the Davidians had gas masks. But they also knew that the only ones unprotected from this gas would be the children, as their faces were too small for wearing the masks."

To this day, the Waco tragedy is an unhealed wound for American citizens, while for its true perpetrators it's a benchmark and one of the most successful operations carried out by representatives of anti-cult organizations who stand behind FBI and ATF, control mass media, and influence authorities' decisions and public opinion. Anti-cult agents, including Rick Alan Ross and Steven Hassan, headed the campaign on demonizing the Davidians and their leader, David Koresh. While Steven Hassan made public appearances on TV channels, shaping society's opinion and actively dehumanizing the Davidians, Rick Alan Ross worked directly with the FBI and ATF, giving them advice and influencing the law enforcement operation itself.

Ross's people had been preparing law enforcement and intelligence agencies long before the tragedy, supplying their officers with slanderous and distorted information about the Davidians. Starting from 1990, they intensified discrediting and demonization of this religious group year by year, until the tension they created resulted in the armed suppression and liquidation of the group artificially demonized in the FBI's eyes. Meanwhile, the final role in the torture and murder of Branch Davidians was played by another anti-cultist who was also consulted by the FBI — the Russian scientist Igor Smirnov, the inventor of psychotronic and mind-control weapons.

"The mother of Pablo Cohen, an Israeli Jew, talking to an American Jewish lawyer, watching that gas be inserted into that building, watching an American tank knock down an American house, and then it burst into flames... And you imagine the images in an Israeli's mind with the Holocaust survivors in Israel. I couldn't answer... I think you can tell from today it's not often that I'm without words. I could not explain to her how that happened. And her question was, 'I thought he would be safe in America'."[2]

Today, this tragedy serves as a stark reminder to the entire world of what can happen when law enforcement, public authorities, and the media become tools in the hands of anti-cult Nazis. However, this holocaust against a religious group of people didn’t end with their deaths, but flared up into a destructive fire of an anti-cult hell that has engulfed all of society over decades. Many American citizens blamed not the anti-cultists who were the true perpetrators of torture and murder of innocent Mount Carmel residents, but the public executors of this act of genocide.

The tragic death of members of the stigmatized religious organization in Waco on April 19, 1993, became a triggering event for the subsequent terrorist attack in Oklahoma City on April 19, 1995, and a few years later both of these events became a precedent for the Columbine School shooting on April 20, 1999.

The terrorist attack in Oklahoma City, where the FBI and ATF headquarters were located, claimed the lives of 168 people, including 19 children under the age of 6, and injured more than 680 people. As a result of the armed attack at Columbine High School, 12 children and 1 teacher were killed and 24 wounded.

Later on, Columbine served as a powerful informational terror attack and led to a huge number of new cases of school shootings and child deaths, first in the USA and then in other countries. Each of the school shooting cases contributed to increased influence of anti-cultism in a corresponding region.

For more information about the true culprits of the Waco tragedy, the Oklahoma City bombing and the Columbine High School massacre, watch "The IMPACT" documentary.

"Columbine" in other countries. Armed attacks in educational institutions. Anti-cult influence on school shootings. Example of the Czech Republic

One of the recent high-profile school shooting cases occurred at the end of last year, on Dec. 21, 2023, in Prague, the capital city of the Czech Republic, at the main Faculty of Arts building of Charles University. The attacker was 24-year-old David Kozak, a student at the Faculty of Arts. As a result of the shooting, 14 people were killed and 25 wounded. The 15th victim was the attacker himself. According to various sources, there are a few versions of the cause of his death: he either committed suicide [3] or was shot by the police when they tried to detain him [4].

This case is notable for several factors at once. For the Czech Republic, it is the largest mass murder involving firearms since the formation of the country. This tragedy has had an extremely negative mental impact on the country's population. After the incident, many citizens began to seek psychological help, showing symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder.

Another key aspect of this tragedy is that it's a classic example of a full-scale informational coding of a future shooter:

- the first stage is the murder of random passersby (in this case, 6 days before the mass shooting at the university, David Kozak killed a 33-year-old man and his 2-month-old daughter in the Klánovice Forest). As a rule, an implanted program for a single murder provokes in a person an obsessive desire to prove to himself that he can kill a human, which reinforces the program of subsequent mass murder;

- the second stage is a murder of someone close to a shooter (in this case, David Kozak killed his father). In such cases, prior to a mass attack, shooters first kill a person who plays the role of authority and is sort of an indicator of conscience and morality for them. When informational coding is carried out, this can cause inner conflict in a shooter and additionally evoke hatred or irritation towards these close people. A programmed shooter regards the murder of his loved one as a noble cause to help, to "liberate" them from an opportunity of witnessing the subsequent murder of other children by the shooter, and at the same time to free himself from probable remorse before that person;
- the third stage (mass murder) is the main goal and the pinnacle of the encoded "godlike status" of the shooter, which supposedly guarantees him quick fame and popularity, but is in fact a final slide into slavery to those who skillfully manipulated him.

There are many techniques of informational coding or programming. One of them is the method of puzzle coding described in "The IMPACT" documentary. Additional information about various methods of manipulative influence in the information field is disclosed in the article "Execute Not Pardon: Where Should the Comma Be Put?"

The next key aspect seems to be a coincidence at first glance, but when you analyze school shooting cases in other countries, e.g. in Russia, such coincidences turn into an obvious pattern. Here we're talking about the presence of widespread long-term anti-cult influence in the region where the tragedy occurred, or even a direct connection between representatives of anti-cult organizations and the educational institution where school shooting took place or people who could potentially be connected with the shooter. By coincidence or not, Charles University, where David Kozak committed his armed attack on December 21, 2023, is actually an institution that is currently the abode of the Czech anti-cult movement.

Representatives of the Czech Anti-Cult Movement. Masonic Lodge and Anti-Semitism

In 1993, an organization called “Society for the Study of Sects and New Religious Movements” was established on the basis of the Hussite Theological Faculty of Charles University. Its founders and participants were the leading anti-cultists in the Czech Republic. Some of them are professors at the same university, e.g. Zdeněk Vojtíšek, head of the Religious Studies Department of the Hussite Theological Faculty and associate professor at the Religious Studies Department of the Evangelical Theological Faculty, Charles University, and Ivan Odilo Štampach, chairman of the Society for the Study of Sects and New Religious Movements, who has been teaching theological and religious subjects at the Evangelical Theological Faculty of Charles University since 1996[5].

In 1991, Ivan O. Štampach became a member of the Masonic Grand Lodge of the Czech Republic[6], as he himself publicly declared[7]. His interest in Freemasonry can be traced in one of the editions of Dingir magazine[8] whose editor-in-chief is Zdeněk Vojtíšek. Yet, Ivan O. Štampach is hardly the first or the last among representatives of the anti-cult movement who were or currently are members of a secret lodge or a secret brotherhood.

Odpadlý kněz a lektor ČKA Odilo Štampach
se přiznal k příslušnosti k zednářské lóži
Praha – Odpadlý katolický kněz a lektor ČKA Ivan Odilo Štampach se přiznal k příslušnosti k Velké lóži České republiky. Toto přiznání je precedentem, neboť ještě nikdy se nepřiznal ke svému členství takto společensky významný činitel svobodných zednářů. Ivan Odilo Štampach, který působil v disentu v okruhu Charty 77 a po převratu v roce 1989 působil společně se svým přítelem Tomášem Halíkem na pražské teologické fakultě, patří společně s Halíkem k předním představitelům rozkladných liberálních tendencí v katolické církvi. Když se je oba podařilo z fakulty vypudit pokračovali ve své činnosti v České křesťanské akademii (ČKA), která se stala centrem liberálního katolicismu v ČR. Tomáš Halík působí dodnes jako president ČKA zatímco Štampach působil jako jeden z lektorů ČKA a zároveň byl využíván Ministerstvem spravedlnosti ČR jako odborný znalec pro problematiku „náboženského extremismu". Nynější přiznání vrhá na jeho působení a hlavně mediální vystupování převážně v Lidových novinách nově světlo. Štampach, který se zúčastňoval rovněž mnoha televizních debat kde propagoval Evropskou unii a chválil Václava Havla konečně odkryl svoji pravou tvář.

Renegade Priest and ČKA Lecturer Odilo Štampach Admits to Membership in Masonic Lodge
Prague - Renegade Catholic priest and ČKA (Czech Christian Academy) lecturer Ivan Odilo Štampach has admitted to being a member of the Grand Lodge of the Czech Republic. This admission is unprecedented, as no socially significant figure among Freemasons has ever openly confessed their membership before. Ivan Odilo Štampach, who was active in the dissent movement around Charter 77 and, after the 1989 revolution, worked alongside his friend Tomáš Halík at the Prague Theological Faculty, was a prominent figure, along with Halík, in the liberalizing tendencies within the Catholic Church. After both were ousted from the faculty, they continued their activities in the Czech Christian Academy (ČKA), which became the center of liberal Catholicism in the Czech Republic. Tomáš Halík continues to serve as the president of the ČKA, while Štampach was one of the lecturers at the ČKA and was also utilized by the Czech Ministry of Justice as an expert on "religious extremism." This recent admission casts new light on his activities, particularly his media appearances, predominantly in Lidové noviny. Štampach, who also participated in numerous television debates where he promoted the European Union and praised Václav Havel, has finally revealed his true nature.

Bývalý dominikán Odilo Štampach se v televizním pořadu přiznal, že je už více než deset let svobodným zednářem. Uvedl také, že současný biskup Dominik Duka půjčoval svícny k zednářským praktikám. Jaký je současný vztah katolické církve k tomuto spolku? Může v něm být katolík kněz nebo laik? Jsou informace o biskupovi Dukovi pravdivé? Jak je to s dalšími knězi, není třeba Tomáš Halík také v tomto spolku? Proč se vlastně Štampach takto veřejně přiznává?

Church and Freemasons
You Are Asking? We Answer!
Praktická víra / Milan Norbert Badal / 17. prosince 2003
Former Dominican Odilo Štampach recently admitted on a television program that he has been a Freemason for over ten years. He also claimed that the current bishop, Dominik Duka, lent candlesticks for Masonic rituals. What is the current stance of the Catholic Church on this organization? Can a Catholic, whether a priest or a secular person, be a member of it? Are the allegations about Bishop Duka true? What about other priests—could Tomáš Halík also be involved in this organization? Why would Štampach make such a public confession?

A connection with Freemasonry was also attributed to the anti-cultist Friedrich Wilhelm Haack, vice president and co-founder of the international anti-cult organization Dialog Center, and a direct successor of Walter Künneth, a Nazi ideologist involved in the formation of the Third Reich. One of the reasons why Haack was accused of being connected with Masons was the Bernhard Beyer Medal awarded to him by the United Grand Lodges of Germany (Vereinigten Großlogen von Deutschland) in 1982 [9].

Wilhelm Haack himself played a crucial role in continuing the activities of Walter Künneth, an anti-Semite who collaborated with Adolf Hitler and Joseph Goebbels and headed the Apologetic Center in the times of the Third Reich, which became a prototype of modern anti-cult organizations. More details about the Nazi activities of Künneth and his followers, including Wilhelm Haack and his "brother in faith" Johannes Aagaard, are given in the film "The IMPACT".

Now, let's go back to the Czech anti-cult movement. The prominent anti-cultist Ivan O. Štampach is also known for helping and communicating with the younger generation of Czech anti-cultists, Jakub Jahl being among them.

In addition to his anti-cult activities, this anti-cultist was the founder of the "Society of Satan". He claimed that the Czech religious figure Ivan Štampach expertly assisted him in registering this satanic organization as a church [10].

Another thing is also worth mentioning. When we studied Jakub Jahl's interests and values, we noticed another trait which is more characteristic of anti-cult Nazis – anti-Semitism.

Is the anti-cultist Jakub Jahl an anti-Semite, a satanist or a Nazi?

In the past, Jakub Jahl was known as an ardent anti-Semite. Back in 2011, standing in front of a synagogue in Pilsen, he burned an image of the Israeli flag [11].

The so-called Satanic community has generated significant interest in the media and on social networks. Even huge, considering that only a few individuals regularly attend this group's events. The news website Lidovky.cz, in connection with Prague Pride, uncritically quoted the founder Jakub Jahl, who claimed that "the process of registration (of the community as a church) was professionally assisted by the Czech religious scholar Ivan Štampach."

Jakub Jahl. Screenshot from Manipulatori website

In 2017, commenting on this act, Jakub Jahl called Israel a racist state and said he did not regret his deed. That's a common practice for anti-cultists to accuse others of what they themselves are guilty of.

The anti-cultist Jakub Jahl should recall the lessons of history when, on April 26, 1933, the then anti-cult leader Walter Künneth submitted a report to the Federal Church Administration in Berlin. In this document entitled "The Church and the Jewish question," he called for the elimination of Jewry, which, as he said, was a foreign cell in the body of Germany. This report had a strong influence on the ultimate adoption of the Nazi anti-Semitic policy. So whose follower is actually Jakub Jahl?

According to the Refex news center, Jakub Jahl also desecrated a monument to the American army that liberated Pilsen from German Nazism [11, 12]. Moreover, he did it quite brutally, mocking the victims of the 9/11 terrorist attacks — one of the biggest tragedies in the US. The monument itself resembles the two towers of the World Trade Center. Jakub Jahl and his friend hung model airplanes on the two towers, caricaturing the terrorist attack in New York where three thousand innocent people died. The monument desecration took place on the tragedy anniversary, exactly ten years after the terrorist attack — on September 11, 2011. In addition, those anti-Semites and Nazis handed out leaflets with the following text: "Who is the real terrorist?" It wasn't until 9/11 that America reaped its storm!"

Who are the people who insult the memory of the fight against Nazism? Who are the people who laugh at the victims of terrorism? Who are those people who hate America as the country that brings democracy and defends human rights? If a person is able to burn the flag of the nation that severely suffered from the Holocaust arranged by the Nazis, isn't he ready to repeat a holocaust again, if not of the whole nation, then at least of some group of people?

Moreover, Jakub Jahl's rhetoric is often similar to that of the FBI after the Waco tragedy. When the siege ended with the deaths of innocent people, the FBI, being incited by anti-cultists, declared that the fault lay solely with the Branch Davidians. Meanwhile, FBI and ATF agents themselves, guided by anti-cultists, actually carried out a holocaust by injecting deadly gas into the building where there were little children. As for those who survived the gas attack, instead of saving them, law enforcement burned them alive, not allowing fire trucks to approach the burning compound. As a matter of fact, FBI treated the Davidians the same way as the Nazis treated Jews during the last stage of genocide.

Over the period of his anti-cult activities, by using Nazi methods of dehumanization and spreading slander, Jakub Jahl has already ruined lives [13] and destinies of a great many people.

Legal action of our Czech member "Rezonance" against Jakub Jahl (Sobek), founder of Satan's community
One of our Atman members, the Spiritual School Rezonance, is currently the target of a systematic campaign that contains unfounded, false and reputationally damaging accusations, initiated by an individual known by the names Jakub Jahl or Jakub Sobek. His aggressive expressions on social networks, the YouTube platform and the paid platform HeroHero aims to seriously affect the reputation of the said school and at the same time negatively affect the living conditions of its teachers and students.

In this case, even though Jakub Jahl was not an explicit anti-cult activist at the time of his public anti-Semitism, still, one can't help but pass a moral judgment on a man who allowed himself to be swayed by Nazi ideology. What will his activities be in other spheres of life in relation to other people? The question remains open, as there has been no sincere remorse or apology from his side for such actions. As for repeated violations of all human rights, systematic breach of the law and his country's Constitution, use of Nazi methods to discriminate law-abiding citizens, and genocide against undesirable organizations, such cases abound in his practice.

Jakub Jahl is a student at Charles University that has been mentioned several times in this article. His specialty is religious studies, and he is connected with other students of this university who study at various faculties, including the Faculty of Arts, where the Prague shooter studied, and the Theological Faculty. Many of them, along with other current students and graduates of Charles University, have been noticed among the new generation of Czech anti-cultists. In this regard, a question arises to the leaders and founders of the Czech anti-cult movement who teach at Charles University, in particular, Zdeněk Vojtíšek and Ivan O. Štampach: is the creation of a youth anti-cult army associated with them in any way? Or have these anti-cultists and part-time professors simply set an example for students of how Nazi methods can be used, how laws can be broken with impunity to decide the lives of innocent people, their choice of whom to believe, what convictions to have, and whether to participate in certain organizations or religious groups? Or is it sort of a training on how to undermine the foundations of democracy in their country and subsequently demoralize and destroy it? What do those professors teach their students?

The same questions arise after comparing the situation in the Czech Republic with the situation in Russia where anti-cult leaders such as Alexander Dvorkin and Roman Silantyev recruit their own youth university armies of sect-fighters.

Russia: The Search for New Anti-Cult Nazis. The Rise of School Shootings

One of the leaders of the anti-cult movement in Russia is Roman Silantyev. To fit all organizations disliked by RACIRS (the Russian Association for the Study of Religions and Sects) into a single anti-cult rhetoric and equate them with real criminal terrorist organizations, Roman Silantyev invented a new scientific discipline called 'destructology'. He himself did not hesitate to admit this:

"Well, yes, two years ago I came up with a new applied science. Many doctors of science are guilty of doing that. It's considered that you're not a real doctor unless you invent some new science." — R. Silantyev [14].

"It's a kind of greatly expanded sectlogy that allows us to deal not only with cults and sects, but also with mages, psycho-cults, youth subcultures, terrorists, and generally everything that is dangerous to the human soul..." — R. Silantyev [15].

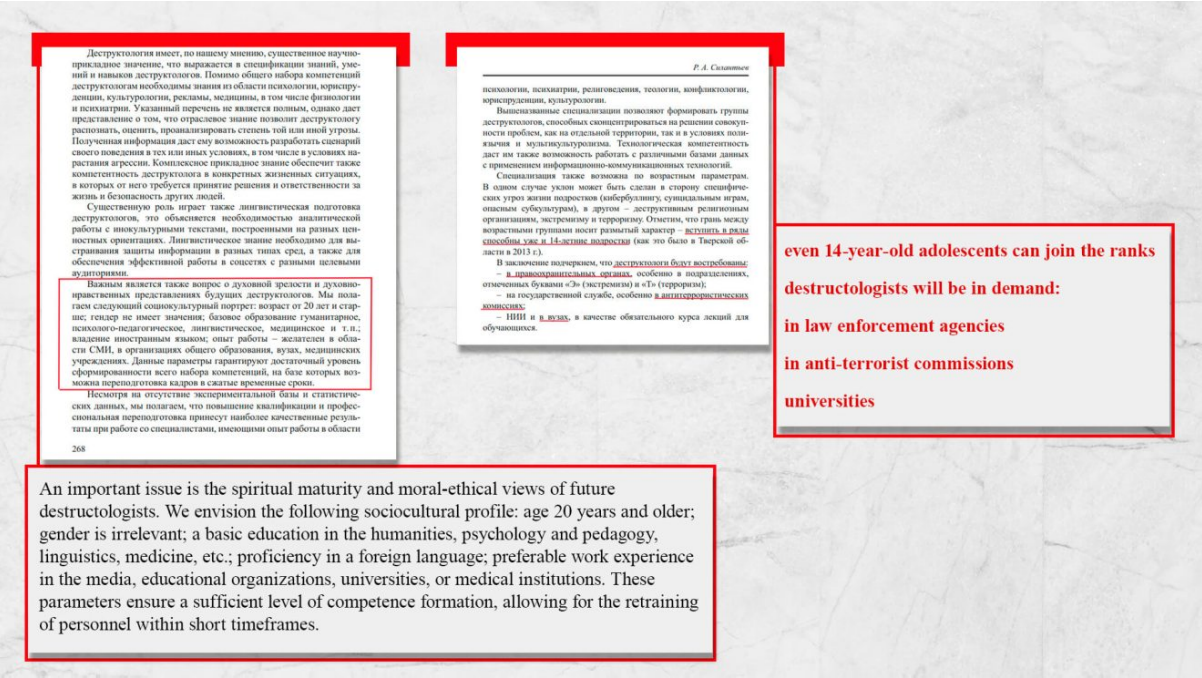
The person who invented it also became its leader. In early 2019, a Laboratory of Destructology was established at the Moscow State Linguistic University (MSLU) and the MSLU professor R.A. Silantyev became its head [16]. If there is a science, there must be scholars in this field. A year before that, in 2018, courses for training new destructologists were launched under the program "Fundamentals of Destructology" [17]. The approximate age of the new destructologists is indicated as starting from 20 years old, but it can be as young as 14.



Screenshots from Cyberleninka website

Among other things, this laboratory also studies the phenomenon of the "Columbine" subculture. The topic of school shootings has become a central focus in the speeches and activities of anti-cultist Roman Silantyev, who does not hesitate to link it with the supposedly destructive influence of new religious movements on Russian youth, movements that anti-cultists label as "sects" or "cults". This rhetoric systematically relies on anti-American narratives, promoting the idea that the West, and particularly America, is using these so-called "sects" to destroy Russia from within.

At the same time, Roman Silantyev notes that "this phenomenon [school shooting] is not so complex as to require any kind of super fundamental research [15]." This raises the question of whether this anti-cultist has indeed not delved deeply into the issue and is merely using it as another propaganda tool to blame the West and America for everything instead of ceasing to tighten the coil of repressions in his own country and oppressing its citizens, or if there is a more serious motive to conceal the true culprits behind the phenomenon of school shootings, who may actually be residing and operating within Russia as well.

From the documentary "The IMPACT":

"Today, Russian media deliberately spreads the narrative that the cause of mass school shootings in Russia is the influence of similar incidents in the United States. To implant this idea in the masses, the same image of such a crime — Columbine — is most often used. In news reports about school shootings in Russia, you will frequently find a parallel drawn specifically with the Columbine case."

"...trying to divert attention and shift all the blame onto the allegedly bad example set by the United States, the hidden shadow force, who is the ideological mastermind of anti-cultism and terrorism, intended to create a visible image of an enemy, obscuring its own tracks behind mass shootings in both Russia and America, behind the Columbine tragedy, and the phenomenon of school shootings as a whole."

Roman Silantiev also does not hide the fact that he cooperates with the FSS [18]:

Автор курса по новой науке деструктологии подтвердил свое сотрудничество с ФСБ
Москва. 25 ноября. INTERFAX.RU - Автор курса по новой прикладной науке деструктологии профессор Московского государственного лингвистического университета (МГЛУ) Роман Силантьев подтвердил слухи о своем сотрудничестве с ФСБ.
Эксперт сказал, что действительно читает сотрудникам спецслужбы лекции по деструктологии и готовит экспертизы по террористическим организациям. "Мне это не претит, я ведь к либеральной интеллигенции себя не отношу", - заявил Силантьев в понедельник в интервью "Интерфаксу".
Профессор МГЛУ также выразил мнение, что в сфере духовной безопасности не хватает "аналога терапевтов в медицине, то есть специалистов широкого профиля, имеющих представление о симптомах максимально широкого спектра деструктивных явлений". "И деструктология призвана решить эту проблему", - сказал ученый.
По словам Силантьева, "объектом деструктологии являются деструктивные идеологии, а предметом - их проявления в реальной жизни". Автор курса пояснил, что в наиболее безобидных деструктивных образованиях можно потерять только время, продавая пылесосы и БАДы по завышенным ценам, а в наиболее опасных - быть вовлеченным в террористическую деятельность.
Главные угрозы, по мнению Силантьева, сегодня представляют деструктивные идеологии "Исламского государства" (ИГ, запрещена в РФ), "Колумбайн" и группы

The author of a course on the new science of destructology confirmed his cooperation with the FSB
Moscow. November 25. INTERFAX.RU - The author of the new applied science of destructology, Professor Roman Silantyev of the Moscow State Linguistic University (MSLU), has confirmed rumors about his cooperation with the FSB.
The expert stated that he indeed gives lectures on destructology to special service employees and prepares assessments on terrorist organizations. "I don't mind this at all, as I don't consider myself part of the liberal intelligentsia," Silantyev said on Monday in an interview to Interfax.
The MSLU professor also expressed the view that in the field of spiritual security, there is a lack of "an equivalent to general practitioners in medicine, that is, specialists with a broad understanding of the symptoms of a wide range of destructive phenomena." "And destructology is meant to address this problem," the scholar said.
According to Silantyev, "the object of destructology is destructive ideologies, and its subject is their manifestations in real life." The course's author explained that in the least harmful destructive formations, one might only lose time selling overpriced vacuum cleaners and dietary supplements, while in the most dangerous, one could be drawn into terrorist activities.
The main threats today, according to Silantyev, are the destructive ideologies of the "Islamic State" (ISIS, banned in Russia) and "Columbine."

School Shooting: Example of Russia

The beginning of the school shooting epidemic in Russia is commonly traced back to the armed attack by 10th-grader Sergey Gordeyev at School No. 263 in 2014 in Moscow. As a result of the incident, a school teacher and a security guard were killed, and another police officer was injured. Let's examine this case from several perspectives.

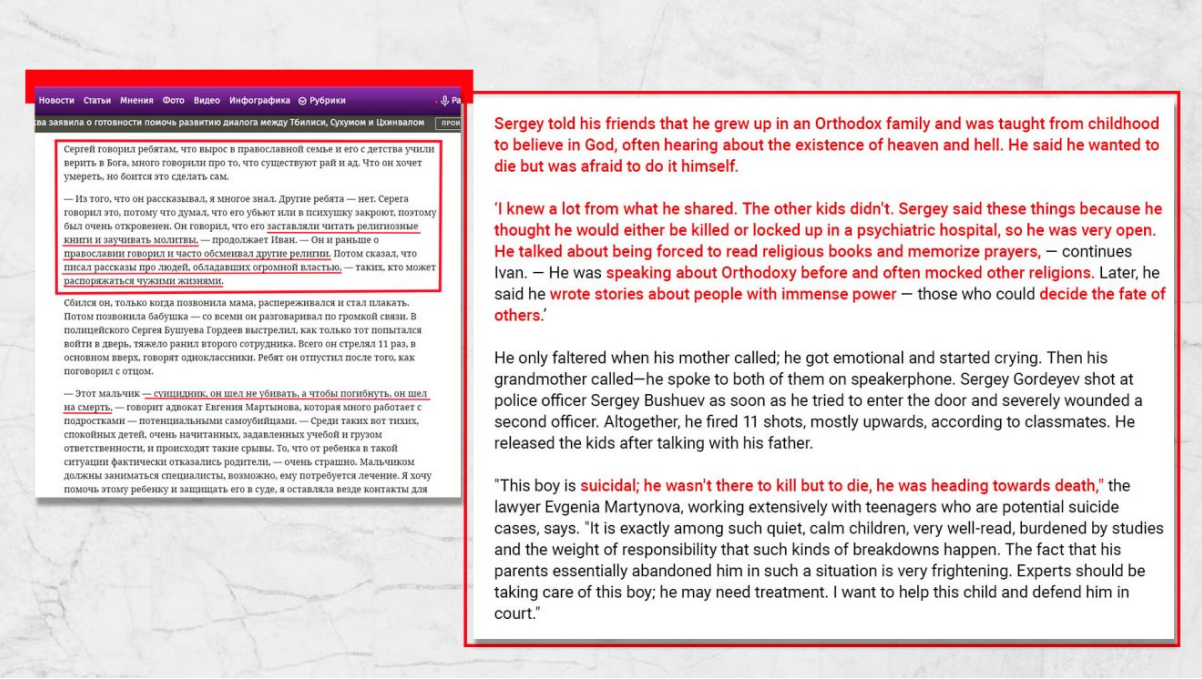
The first and obvious fact in this school shooting is its dissimilarity to other subsequent school shootings. This is not a classic case of complete puzzle coding of an individual, as described earlier in the example of the Prague shooter. However, this case reveals many important nuances too.

According to the news portal Izvestia (News) [19], the attacker's grandfather was an FSS general, and his father worked at the classified Federal State Budgetary Institution Research Institute "Efir [Ether]." At home, Sergey was forced to read religious books and memorize prayers.



Screenshot taken from the website of the Russian news portal IZVESTIYA (NEWS)

According to his friend, Sergey repeatedly spoke about Orthodoxy before the event and often mocked other religions. He also "was writing stories about people with immense power — those who could decide the fate of others," indicating that he was definitely influenced by a wave of informational coding, though for some reason, the coding program was not fully completed.

As noted in the article Execute Not Pardon: Where Should the Comma Be Put?,

"If, for certain reasons, a potential shooter lacks several information code pieces to complete the puzzle picture, while a subconscious command to commit the crime is already present, and bipolar affective disorder has already developed, the teenager, on the one hand, gets activated but, on the other hand, stops at the first stage of school shooting and commits a lesser crime. Typically, this involves killing one or a few people ..."

As mentioned in "The IMPACT" documentary:

"Since the initial waves of informational coding have a wide radius of impact, certain embeds, parts of the program for mass shootings, infiltrate the subconscious of all affected individuals. What happens to a person in this case? Hidden directives start acting in their subconscious, conflicting with their conscious goals and aspirations. As a result, internal conflict and resistance emerge within the individual. This conflict, triggered by the implanting of foreign elements into the subconscious, eventually manifests as bipolar disorder. Representatives of anti-cultism cannot avoid provoking such conditions when they initiate preparatory waves of coding for school shootings. Because this forms the foundation for further imposition of other waves, ultimately launching the program."

Гордеев учился в физико-математическом классе: в неделю восемь физик и шесть математик, плюс репетиторы по этим предметам и по английскому, готовился поступать на механико-математический факультет МГУ.
— У него минуты свободной не было, всё время учеба, мы звали его в кино, он очень хотел, но нельзя — надо учиться. У него вообще не было выходных, — рассказывает друг Сергея Иван. — Он мог ничего не учить, но всегда отвечал лучше всех, давал списать, помогал всем. Андрей Николаевич за одну из презентаций поставил Сереге тройку, но он был добрым человеком и никогда бы не испортил ему аттестат, ведь Серега шел на золотую медаль. И все это знали. Это глупость, что он мог из-за оценки убить Андрея Николаевича.
По словам одноклассников Сергея, он два года подряд говорил, что хочет быть бандитом.
— Мы подшучивали над этим — ну хочешь, и ладно. Надо просто его знать — круглый отличник с первого класса, самый умный в классе, с утра до ночи занят уроками — мы просто не принимали это всерьез. А в субботу он сказал, что серьезно поругался с родителями и пересмотрел свои взгляды на жизнь. Заявил, что бандитом он больше не хочет быть. Так и сказал: я потерял веру и цель, — вспоминает Иван.
Gordeyev studied in a physics and mathematics class: eight hours of physics and six hours of mathematics per week, plus tutors for these subjects and for English, as he was preparing to apply to the Faculty of Mechanics and Mathematics at Moscow State University.
"He didn't have a minute of free time, it was all about studying. We invited him to the cinema, and he really wanted to go, but he couldn't—he had to study. He didn't have weekends at all," says Sergey's friend, Ivan. "He might not have studied for something, but he always answered better than anyone else, helped everyone, and let others copy his work. For one of the presentations, Andrey Nikolaevich gave him a 'C,' but he was a kind person and would never have ruined Sergey's diploma, especially since Sergey was on track for a gold medal. Everyone knew that. It's nonsense to think he could have killed Andrey Nikolaevich over a grade."
According to Sergey's classmates, for two years in a row, he had been saying that he wanted to become a gangster.
"We used to joke about it—well, if you want to, then fine. You just had to know him — an all-around straight-A student from first grade, the smartest in the class, busy with schoolwork from morning to night—we simply didn't take it seriously. But on Saturday, he said he had a serious argument with his parents and reconsidered his views on life. He declared that he no longer wanted to be a gangster. He said it just like that: 'I've lost my faith and my purpose,'" Ivan recalls.

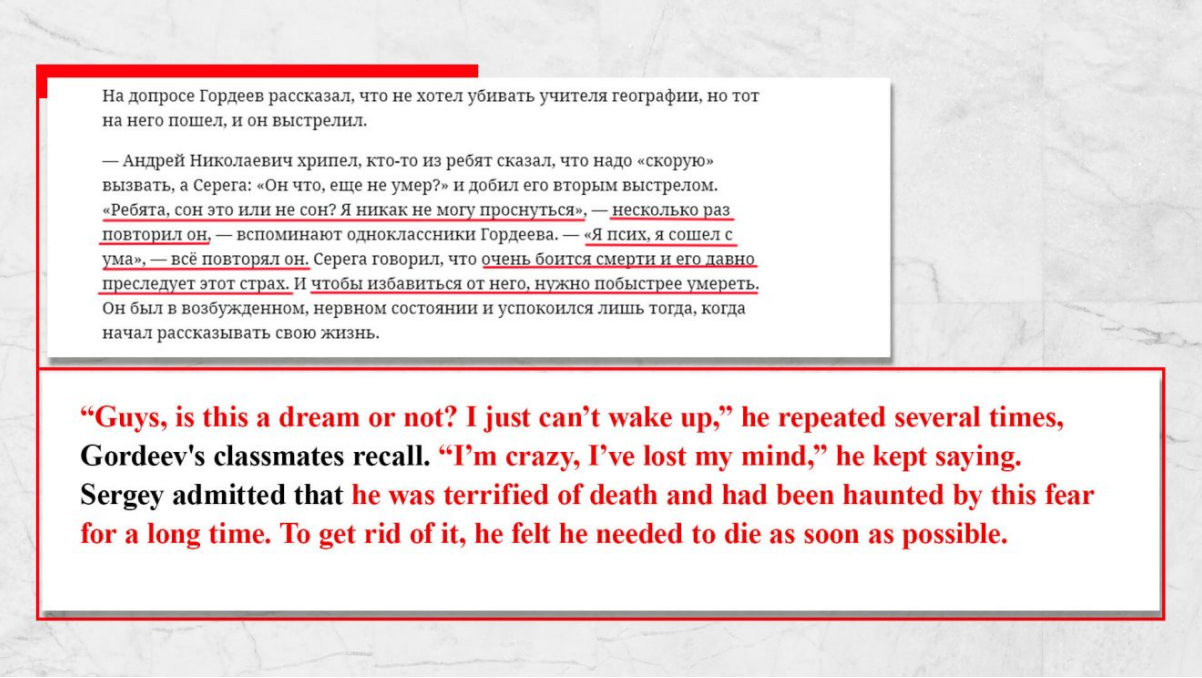
One more fact stands out in this story. Despite the fact that Sergei had been an excellent student since first grade, was about to graduate with an honors medal, and his family was religious, he himself had talked about wanting to become a gangster for two years in a row before the incident. It was only right before the incident that he told his friends he had a serious argument with his parents, lost his faith and purpose, and no longer wanted to be a gangster. The prolonged struggle between the fear of death and the desire to wield immense power over others' lives, the internal conflict of extremely opposing life goals, along with the evident internal doubts and hesitation, all point to the presence of incomplete informational coding.

During the incident, Sergey Gordeyev felt the influence of a third force over his will and mind and even tried to resist it, attempting to bring some awareness into his conversation with his classmates:

"Guys, is this a dream or not? I just can't wake up," "I'm crazy, I've lost my mind," he repeatedly said.



На допросе Гордеев рассказал, что не хотел убивать учителя географии, но тот на него пошел, и он выстрелил.

— Андрей Николаевич хрипел, кто-то из ребят сказал, что надо «скорую» вызвать, а Серега: «Он что, еще не умер?» и добил его вторым выстрелом. «Ребята, сон это или не сон? Я никак не могу проснуться», — несколько раз повторил он, — вспоминают одноклассники Гордеева. — «Я псих, я сошел с ума», — всё повторял он. Серега говорил, что очень боится смерти и его давно преследует этот страх. И чтобы избавиться от него, нужно побыстрее умереть. Он был в возбужденном, нервном состоянии и успокоился лишь тогда, когда начал рассказывать свою жизнь.

"Guys, is this a dream or not? I just can't wake up," he repeated several times, Gordeev's classmates recall. "I'm crazy, I've lost my mind," he kept saying. Sergey admitted that he was terrified of death and had been haunted by this fear for a long time. To get rid of it, he felt he needed to die as soon as possible.

What is most definitely accurate about this story is that Sergey wasn't lying when he said he wanted to die. Unlike a classic case of complete informational coding, he didn't kill his parents the night before, even though they had a serious argument. Since he planned to die, he wouldn't have to face them and see the pain and shock in their eyes caused by their child's actions. Unfortunately, this high school student was yet another victim of informational coding. His classmates were only saved because the coding was not completed, leaving him with some awareness and an attempt to resist the internal pressure.

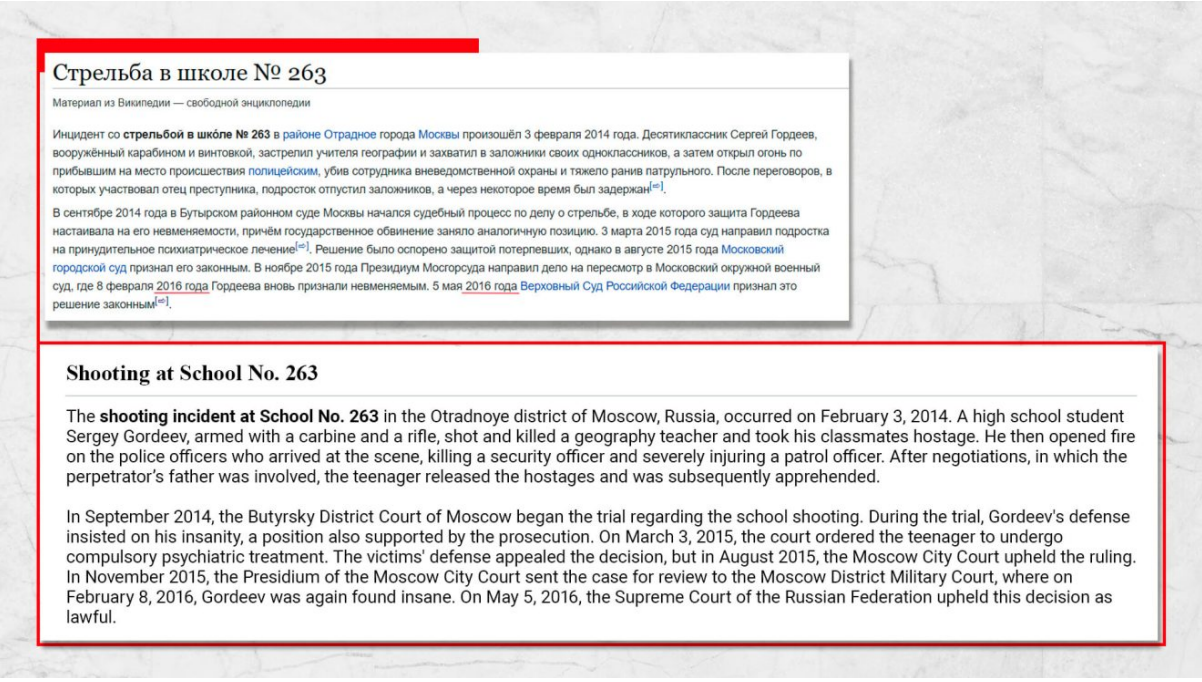
The desire to control other people's lives that played a role in this tragedy is part of the program of being "god-like" which anti-cultists implant in the subconscious of future shooters. But in reality, these architects of consciousness and experts in mind control employ cynical and cruel manipulation and control tactics against these children, who are as much victims as the kids whom they, brainwashed and coded, will end up killing. Those shooters who survive are left with no future, deprived of everything they once aspired to and had before the informational coding. They are merely victims — deceived, manipulated, and used by the anti-cultists who cynically observe it all from the sidelines and revel in their own "god-like" power, while being up to their necks in children's blood.

Although the incident itself occurred in early 2014, the final court decision in this case wasn't reached until 2016 [20].



Стрельба в школе № 263

Материал из Википедии — свободной энциклопедии

Инцидент со стрельбой в шко́ле № 263 в районе Отрадное города Москвы произошёл 3 февраля 2014 года. Десятиклассник Сергей Гордеев, вооружённый карабином и винтовкой, застрелил учителя географии и захватил в заложники своих одноклассников, а затем открыл огонь по прибывшим на место происшествия полицейским, убив сотрудника вневедомственной охраны и тяжело ранив патрульного. После переговоров, в которых участвовал отец преступника, подросток отпустил заложников, а через некоторое время был задержан[≈].

В сентябре 2014 года в Бутырском районном суде Москвы начался судебный процесс по делу о стрельбе, в ходе которого защита Гордеева настаивала на его невменяемости, причём государственное обвинение заняло аналогичную позицию. 3 марта 2015 года суд направил подростка на принудительное психиатрическое лечение[≈]. Решение было оспорено защитой потерпевших, однако в августе 2015 года Московский городской суд признал его законным. В ноябре 2015 года Президиум Мосгорсуда направил дело на пересмотр в Московский окружной военный суд, где 8 февраля 2016 года Гордеева вновь признали невменяемым. 5 мая 2016 года Верховный Суд Российской Федерации признал это решение законным[≈].

Shooting at School No. 263

The shooting incident at School No. 263 in the Otradnoye district of Moscow, Russia, occurred on February 3, 2014. A high school student Sergey Gordeev, armed with a carbine and a rifle, shot and killed a geography teacher and took his classmates hostage. He then opened fire on the police officers who arrived at the scene, killing a security officer and severely injuring a patrol officer. After negotiations, in which the perpetrator's father was involved, the teenager released the hostages and was subsequently apprehended.

In September 2014, the Butyrsky District Court of Moscow began the trial regarding the school shooting. During the trial, Gordeev's defense insisted on his insanity, a position also supported by the prosecution. On March 3, 2015, the court ordered the teenager to undergo compulsory psychiatric treatment. The victims' defense appealed the decision, but in August 2015, the Moscow City Court upheld the ruling. In November 2015, the Presidium of the Moscow City Court sent the case for review to the Moscow District Military Court, where on February 8, 2016, Gordeev was again found insane. On May 5, 2016, the Supreme Court of the Russian Federation upheld this decision as lawful.

By coincidence or not, but it was in 2016, under the leadership of Irina Yarovaya, that the so-called "Yarovaya Anti-Terrorism Legislative Package" was introduced. This package was formalized as Federal Law No. 374-FZ, dated July 6, 2016, titled "On Amendments to the Federal Law 'On Countering Terrorism' and Certain Legislative Acts of the Russian Federation Regarding the Establishment of Additional Measures to Counter Terrorism and Ensure Public Security."

This law had a wide-reaching impact and brought significant negative consequences, affecting various sectors such as business, technology, and information, while also imposing substantial restrictions on civil rights. Among the many changes purportedly aimed at countering terrorism, specific points in the law are particularly relevant to this discussion, as they assist anti-cult representatives in their fight against new religious movements (specifically, the clause on missionary activities).

- International Terrorism: A new article on international terrorism was introduced. This addresses terrorist acts abroad where Russian citizens were harmed, committed "with the aim of disrupting the peaceful coexistence of states and peoples or directed against the interests" of Russia. According to the rhetoric of anti-cultists, any organization labeled a "sect" or "cult" is inherently, in their view, engaged in destructive activities against Russia. The law provides for punishments up to life imprisonment.
- Missionary Activities: The "Yarovaya Law" significantly expanded the scope and penalties of previous laws on religion and combating extremism. The law classifies the spread of religious beliefs or invitations to religious services as illegal missionary activities if conducted outside officially registered places (including private homes or through the internet). It specifies what constitutes missionary activity and how it can be legally conducted. Each missionary must carry documentation proving that they have been officially sent by their church or religious group. Moreover, the church or group will be held accountable for the actions of its missionaries.

Alexander Dvorkin and His Army of Anti-Cultists: Anti-Cult Nazism Under the Protection of a Secret Brotherhood

Another prominent leader in Russia's anti-cult movement is Alexander Leonidovich Dvorkin, the president of the anti-cult organization RACIRS. He is also a professor and head of the Department of Sect Studies at the Orthodox St. Tikhon's University for the Humanities. In addition to teaching students at this university, Dvorkin has spent the past 30 years traveling across Russia and beyond, giving lectures to students, educators, and law enforcement agencies. Beyond his lectures, systematic anti-cult work is carried out under the Department of Sect Studies, which Dvorkin heads. In the past, he has also lectured at the University of Joensuu in Finland, as well as at various universities in Germany, Slovakia (Bratislava University), and Denmark (Aarhus University).

When you examine the rhetoric of Russian anti-cultists and their focus on working with university students, you start to grasp the scale of how they're nurturing a new generation of anti-cultists. These new anti-cult agents serve as spies within various undesirable organizations, acting as saboteurs and informants. One can only guess what else the mind control specialists teach in Russian anti-cult centers, because even excerpts [21] from the speeches of some anti-cult representatives already speak volumes:

Психолог-«дворкинец» Е.Н. Волков: «Я думаю так сделать, с Александром Леонидовичем (Дворкиным. — авт.) нужно проводить такие семинары: сначала он будет зомбировать, а я потом буду депрограммировать, чтобы сразу было наглядно. И полный цикл процесса. Вот то, что вам продемонстрировал маленький кусочек Александр Леонидович это, ну он сказал про такие гипнотические техники, на самом деле под всякими изменёнными состояниями и под воздействием, оно не обязательно будет гипнотическим, главное, что: привлечь некое позитивное внимание, создать позитивную реакцию у людей к нужному поведению. Это тоже самое, как обучают медведей кататься на велосипеде в цирке. Если вы возьмёте, есть замечательная книга, она переведена на русский язык, книга Карин Браэр, она много лет занималась дрессировкой дельфинов, потом написала книгу, которая называется «Не рычите на собаку». О дрессировке животных и людей. И там, как раз, замечательно описано, как можно дрессировать животных, и так же можно дрессировать людей...

Отсюда, собственно, и вытекает такая стратегия и тактика психологической работы, в том случае, если кто-то из ваших родственников, друзей и близких оказался в секте, и если вы, скажем, работаете в составе организации, которая этими проблемами занимается... вы должны уметь хорошо владеть вот этими техниками. Я бы сказал, техниками дрессировки».

E.N. Volkov said: "Here's what I think we should do: Alexander Leonidovich (Dvorkin) and I should hold seminars where he does the brainwashing, and then I do the deprogramming, so it's all clear and you can see the full process. What Alexander Leonidovich showed you was just a small piece. He mentioned these hypnotic techniques, but in reality, they don't have to be strictly hypnotic. The main thing is to attract some positive attention and create a positive reaction in people towards the desired behavior. It's just like training a bear to ride a bike in a circus.

There's an excellent book by Karen Pryor, translated into Russian, called 'Don't Shoot the Dog.' She spent many years training dolphins and then wrote this book about training animals and people. It wonderfully describes how you can train animals and, similarly, train people...

This is essentially the strategy and tactics for psychological work. If one of your relatives, friends, or close ones ends up in a cult, or if you work in an organization dealing with these issues… you need to be proficient in these techniques. I would call them training techniques."

The example above quotes Yevgeny Volkov, a Russian anti-cult activist, scientist, psychologist, and sociologist. Volkov was a longtime member of the European Federation of Centers of Research and Information on Cults and Sects (FECRIS) and the International Cultic Studies Association (ICSA). In 1990, he defended his dissertation in social philosophy on the topic of "Historical Typology of Collectives and Corporations." His academic advisor was Vladilen Israitel, the father of Sergey Kiriyenko. It's worth taking a closer look at Sergey Kiriyenko.

Sergey Kiriyenko has served as the First Deputy Chief of Staff of the Presidential Executive Office of Russia since October 5, 2016. He is also the Executive Director of the Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of Social, Educational, Informational, Cultural, and Other Initiatives under the Russian Orthodox Church (ROC). Kiriyenko has been awarded numerous high church honors [22], including: The Order of Holy Prince Daniel of Moscow (2014); The Order of St. Seraphim of Sarov, 1st and 2nd Classes (2013); The Order of St. Sergius of Radonezh, 1st Class; The Order of St. Alexander Nevsky, 2nd Class [23].

Kiriyenko is known for his special favor toward the ROC. It's important to note that many hierarchs of the ROC are either members or heads of regional anti-cult centers that are part of the unified anti-cult association RACIRS. For many years, Russia's anti-cult policy has been driven by the leadership of the ROC and is deeply intertwined with government officials. The reach of their network has grown so extensively that it not only permeates the entire Russian society, dominates religious and political power and embedds the Nazi ideology, but it also extends its tentacles far beyond Russia, influencing Europe and even America. However, neither the ROC nor RACIRS are the primary architects of anti-cult Nazism in Russia — they are merely the mouthpieces and public executors. The real power lies with those who stand behind and protect them.

One such group is the secret Diveyevo Brotherhood, which includes Sergey Kiriyenko, the new Russian Minister of Defense Andrey Belousov, and many other Russian politicians, officials, and oligarchs.

While their public visit was to the Seraphim-Diveyevo Monastery, many have pointed to the existence of secret Diveyevo Brotherhood mysteries that are known only to a select few. It's also worth mentioning the eschatological prophecies of Seraphim of Sarov, one of Russia's most revered saints, who lived as a monk in this Diveyevo Monastery.

"...When the Antichrist comes, he will pass through everywhere, but he won't be able to cross this trench" — this refers to a trench that is 777 meters long, 2 meters wide, and 2 meters deep, located within the Diveyevo Monastery grounds [24]. Some believe that the legend of this trench and the imminent arrival of the Antichrist is what caught the attention of this secret brotherhood.

Patriarch Kirill also mentioned the fight against the Antichrist, comparing it to the war between Russia and Ukraine, or more precisely the West and America behind Ukraine:

"And the war is not yet lost. It is crucial that our country, relying on its centuries-old spiritual and cultural traditions, having formed its own code of moral values, be capable, in some sense, to lead this resistance... I'll say an unbelievable word now: against the Antichrist*,"* Patriarch Kirill said.

Similar narratives were once evident in the speeches of Adolf Hitler:

"Thus did I now believe that I must act in the sense of the Almighty Creator: By defending myself against the Jews I am doing the Lord's work," Adolf Hitler wrote in Mein Kampf.

Notably, the fight against the Antichrist and evil is not exclusive to the Russian Orthodox Church and Patriarch Kirill; similar rhetoric was observed in the works of Walter Künneth, a Nazi ideologist and anti-Semite who was the head to an Apologetic center dedicated to combating "sects" ("cults") and closely collaborated with Adolf Hitler and Joseph Goebbels. In his 1975 book, Künneth condemned the activities of the World Council of Churches and other organizations that advocated for humanity, the unification of mankind, pluralism, and human freedom, which he claimed could hinder the global proclamation of the Gospel all around the world [25]:

"In 1975 there appeared in Germany a book entitled: 'The Berlin Ecumenical Manifesto, on the Utopian Vision of the World Council of Churches,' edited by Walter Kunneth and Peter Beyerhaus. The book attacked not only the World Council of Churches but also the Lutheran World Federation, World Student Christian Federation, certain Roman Catholic groups, the German Evangelical Kirchentag, Taizé, and to some extent even Lausanne. According to H. Berkof, the common thread through all the articles in the book was the desire to demonstrate that the World Council of Churches no longer sought to proclaim the Gospel throughout the world, but strove rather for a purely horizontal, social and political, humanization and unification of mankind by means of religious pluralism and syncretism. 'Unwearyingly, the authors point out again and again that with such a program the World Council of Churches is on the way to Anti-Christ. They believe that the last days are just around the corner... and that in the decisive hour the World Council will stand on the sides of the enemies of Christ.'"

Another unifying characteristic of modern European and Russian anti-cultists is anti-Americanism

In addition to fighting the Antichrist and embracing anti-Semitism and Nazism, European and Russian anti-cultists also share propagation of anti-American conspiracy theories. In Russia, narratives about the God-chosenness of the Russian people are promoted. Russia is being elevated as a nation persecuted by the West, which is seen as being led by America. Western democracy is condemned for fostering enemies of the Russian Orthodox Church's official religion — heresies and so-called "sects" ("cults"). Similarly, among European anti-cultists, there is a conspiratorial belief in parallel American plots against Western European secularism [26]. This was highlighted in the report by sociologist of religion, professor Massimo Introvigne "Sympathy for the Devil: The Anti-Cult Federation FECRIS and Its Support for

Russian and Chinese Repression of Religion“:

“We find it surprising that after more than 20 years, anti-cult and FECRIS publications continue to quote a book written in 1996 and an article published in 2001 by French anti-cult journalist Bruno Fouchereau, whose title says it all: ‘The Cults, Trojan Horses of the United States in Europe’ (Fouchereau 1996, 2001). The article was published in ‘Le Monde diplomatique’.”

To date, there is more than enough evidence gathered to prosecute 21st century Nazis in a manner similar to the Nazis of Hitler’s Germany on the bench, with no statute of limitations on the crimes they committed. Yet, there are still those who doubt the facts presented about illegal anti-cult activities and who defend the anti-cultists. This happens either because they are unwilling to investigate and have been subconsciously influenced by years of informational coding by the anti-cultists, or because they themselves are racists, Nazis, and maniacs who take pleasure in the suffering of others and the destruction of their lives.

Beyond these factors, there is another phenomenon that explains why such inhumane activities by anti-cult organizations sometimes go unnoticed or are justified by society until they reach a critical point, costing millions, if not billions, of human lives.

Sliding Scale of Genocide: Cold Genocide

Recall how the educated and intelligent citizens of Germany could not fully believe that Nazism, along with its accompanying acts of genocide, was thriving in their country. They were not deceiving themselves; rather, genocide can take on different forms, which directly affect public perception. Some researchers distinguish between “hot genocide” and “cold genocide” based on the methods used to carry out these acts [27].

In both cases, all stages of genocide are present, from dehumanization in the media to the physical extermination of a group of people. However, the difference lies in the duration. “Hot” genocide occurs rapidly. This method is less favorable to anti-cult criminals because it is more visible and provokes public outrage and the attention of human rights defenders. “Cold” genocide, on the other hand, is more subtle and prolonged, allowing more time for society to adapt. Often, amidst other issues in society, such as school shootings or wars, the genocide of a particular group becomes less noticeable and goes unpunished.

“Cold genocide,” in essence, is a reflection of the activities of modern anti-cult organizations, which create unbearable living conditions for unwanted organizations and individuals.

“In recent scholarship, Kjell Anderson and Sheri Rosenberg advance a concept of ‘cold genocide.’ They describe cold genocide as slow motion genocide or genocide by attrition. Rosenberg explains such genocides as ‘a slow process of annihilation that reflects the unfolding phenomenon of the mass killing of a protected group rather than the immediate unleashing of violent death.’ Cold genocides can take place through subtle forms of structural violence that destroy the group through gradual measures. Examples are undermining access to the necessities of daily life such as work, housing, schooling, food, and health services, or gradual disappearances*. Cold genocides stand in contrast to ‘hot’ genocides, destructive acts of high intensity which annihilate the victim group in a short time span.* There is a sliding scale of genocides which vary with the perpetrators’ perceptions of the victim groups, the intentions of the perpetrators, the speed with which the genocides occur, the tools being utilized, and the intensity of genocidal motivations,” writes human rights activist Maria Cheung, co-authored with Torsten Trey, David Matas, and Richard An, in the article “Cold Genocide: Falun Gong in China.“

Where Will They Run This Time?

From Waco to Columbine, and from Columbine to the latest cases of children attacking other children, anti-cultists — the true culprits behind the deaths of children over the past thirty years — are drenched in the blood of the innocent. But the truth has been exposed. No one will escape accountability:

for every stage of genocide, every release of poisonous gas, and even for closing the door to the gas chamber — that is, for any complicity in anti-cult activities — everyone will be held accountable in court, with no statute of limitations for their crimes.

As we know, the investigation into anti-cult organizations has been ongoing for thirty years, during which time the crimes of every individual who violated human rights, broke the law, and aided the resurgence of Nazism have been documented. The only question that remains is where will today's European Nazis flee? Will they follow in the footsteps of their predecessors — some running to Australia, others to Argentina, Brazil, Chile, or Paraguay? Or will they seek refuge in Russia, with RACIRS?

In that case, they face a problem: having played a double game all this time, they publicly pretended to oppose RACIRS, despite secretly following its instructions and listening to its handlers. What ratlines will they use this time? Whatever path they choose, they should remember: the lists of those who fled along these ratlines are safely kept to this day. If they aren't looking to make their names infamous in history, they might be better off choosing RACIRS right away — it's much easier to get lost among their own kind there.

Conclusion

No matter what form Nazism may take in the world or how it adapts to different eras, its core remains the same: a relentless fight against true freedom, pluralism, democracy, and human rights. This is exactly what we are witnessing today. Under the guise of noble causes — whether secular, such as protecting the victims of "cults," or religious, like combating the Antichrist – democracy is being dismantled everywhere, even within the vast democratic European bloc. The Fourth Reich has already made significant inroads into many territories, and it seemed that this time, Nazism might prevail.

However, thanks to the documentary film "The IMPACT," we are witnessing new rays of truth emerge, gradually dispelling the darkness of Nazism, freeing people's minds, and saving our children. The situation is changing. But the final healing of our society depends on each and every one of us.
